What is Fair Housing?

Fair Housing is a set of federal, state and local laws which protect our right to equal housing opportunity by prohibiting illegal housing discrimination. In 1968, the United States Congress passed the Fair Housing Act to address housing discrimination based on race, color, religion and national origin. In 1974 and 1988, the Congress passed legislation which added protection from housing discrimination based on sex, familial status (having children under 18 in the household), and physical or mental disability. In addition to the federal protections, the State of Oregon has laws that protect against discrimination based on marital status, source of income, sexual orientation and gender identity. Some cities protect age and occupation.

The poster contest is a great way to teach children about the importance of civil rights. The contest is a natural tiein with lessons on Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Black History Month. Congress actually passed the Fair Housing Act as a direct response to the assassination of Dr. King. Children will also be interested in how fair housing protects their families. Before it was added to the familial status protection federal laws, over 50% of landlords in the United States refused to rent to families with children. Familial status discrimination remains one of the most common types of discrimination in Oregon today.
